

Use this as a single brief for an AI social agent. Wherever you see “Platform branch,” follow the instructions for the chosen platform only.

1. Define goal, KPI, and platform

1. Identify the primary objective
 - Choose one main outcome: clicks to website/landing page, DMs/messages, profile visits, or event/lead form registrations.
 - Set a primary KPI for success (click-through rate, number of link clicks, cost per click, number of DMs, or form starts).
2. Select the platform(s)
 - Specify which platform this post is for: Facebook, Instagram, X, or LinkedIn (or a combination for adapted versions).
 - For multi-platform campaigns, mark one “source” version (usually LinkedIn or long-form Facebook) and instruct the agent to adapt to other platforms.
3. Define the audience persona
 - Describe who the post is for: demographics, location, role/title (if relevant), interests, and primary pain point or desire.
 - Write a one-sentence audience summary the agent can speak directly to (e.g., “Busy parents in Salt Lake City who want dental visits to be fast and convenient”).

2. Clarify offer, destination, and message

4. Clarify the offer
 - Specify exactly what the user gets when they click: article, booking page, discount offer, webinar, quiz, resource, or DM conversation.
 - State the primary benefit from the user’s perspective (save time, save money, reduce stress, improve appearance, etc.).
5. Define the destination experience

- Provide the URL or destination and its core headline/promise.
- Ensure the post's promise, wording, and imagery match the destination so the click feels consistent (no clickbait).

6. Choose one core message

- Select a single main idea or promise that everything in the post will support.
- Remove or downplay secondary messages that distract from the click or main action.

3. Master copy structure (applies to all platforms)

7. Craft a strong hook

- Write the first line to immediately grab attention using one of: pain point, bold benefit, surprising insight, or specific question.
- Make the hook concrete and specific, not vague or generic; the reader should instantly know why this matters to them.

8. Provide value and context

- In 2–6 short sentences, explain the situation, highlight the main benefit, and add one piece of proof (data point, mini-story, credential, or simple “how it works”).
- Keep language clear and conversational; avoid jargon unless your audience is highly expert.

9. End with a direct CTA

- Use one clear action command aligned with the objective: “Click to book,” “Tap the link to see options,” “DM us ‘PLAN’,” “Register here,” etc.
- Avoid multiple competing CTAs in the same post; one main action only.

10. Ensure clarity and honesty

- Explicitly state what happens after the click (see calendar, see pricing, see step-by-step guide).
- Avoid exaggerated promises; keep claims believable and accurate.

4. Visual and formatting rules (all platforms)

11. Design for mobile first

- Assume the user sees this on a phone: ensure key text is large, faces or focal objects are clear, and no crucial content is cut off.
- Keep visuals simple, with a strong focal point and minimal clutter.

12. Maintain brand consistency

- Use consistent colors, fonts (or closest equivalents), logo style, and tone of voice across all platforms.
- Make sure posts are recognizable as the same brand even when adapted for different networks.

13. Optimize media choice

- Use images for simple offers or clear before/after style outcomes.
- Use short video/Reels for demonstrations, transformations, or emotional storytelling.
- Use carousels/documents when explaining steps or multiple options, with the final slide driving the click.

5. Platform branches

A. Facebook branch

14. Facebook objective and structure

- Focus on: link clicks, conversions, or messages.
- Place the hook in the first 1–2 lines so it appears before “See more.”
- Use short paragraphs; avoid large blocks of text.

15. Facebook creative and CTA

- Use a strong, clear image or short video that obviously matches the offer.
- End copy with one direct CTA that matches the button label (“Learn more,” “Book now,” “Send message”).

16. Facebook engagement support

- When appropriate, include a simple question or prompt to encourage comments and shares after the click-focused CTA.

B. Instagram branch

17. Instagram objective and format

- Choose the main action: bio link click, Story/Reel link tap, or DM.
- Pick a format: Feed post (single or carousel) or Reel; use Stories for reminder and support.

18. Instagram visual-first hook

- Make the first frame/slide visually bold with a clear promise or strong visual outcome.
- Ensure any on-image text is extremely short (3–7 words) and legible on a small screen.

19. Instagram caption and CTA

- Use a compelling first 2–3 lines in the caption to hook before the “...more” cut.
- Write a concise caption (short paragraphs or bullets) that leads to one specific CTA: “Tap our bio link,” “DM us ‘OFFER,’” or “Swipe through, then tap the link.”

20. Instagram discoverability

- Add 5–10 relevant hashtags (niche and local), location tag when useful, and tag partners or featured people sparingly and intentionally.

C. X (Twitter) branch

21. X objective and copy length

- Decide if the primary goal is link clicks, replies, or reposts that lead to clicks.
- Aim for concise posts (~70–120 characters for single posts) unless using a thread.

22. X hook and value

- Lead with a bold statement, clear result, or sharp question that stops scroll.
- Give a short, concrete reason to click the link (what they’ll learn or gain) before or around the link.

23. X link and threads

- Include only one primary link per post.
- For deeper explanations, create a short thread: first post = hook, middle posts = key insights/steps, final post = CTA and link.

24. X hashtags and media

- Use 0–2 targeted hashtags maximum.
- Add a simple, relevant image or graphic when it clarifies or strengthens the offer.

D. LinkedIn branch

25. LinkedIn objective and persona

- Focus on professional outcomes: website visits, event registrations, lead form clicks, or profile visits.
- Anchor messaging in the role, responsibilities, and pain points of the specific professional persona.

26. LinkedIn content style

- Open with a concrete result, contrarian insight, or direct problem statement in the first 2 lines.
- Provide real value in-feed (insight, mini-framework, short story, or bullet list) before or alongside any link.

27. LinkedIn structure and CTA

- Use short paragraphs and light bullets for readability.
- End with a clear CTA: “Read the full guide here,” “Register at this link,” or “Comment ‘PLAYBOOK’ and I’ll send the link.”

28. LinkedIn media and professionalism

- Choose plain text, image, document/carousel, or video based on how much explanation is needed.
- Keep tone professional but human; align with your positioning (expert, mentor, challenger).

6. Variations, testing, and final checks

29. Create test variations

- For each campaign, generate at least:
 - 2–3 different hooks
 - 2 alternative primary texts (short vs slightly longer)
 - 2 visual options (different angles, layouts, or formats)

- Change only one major element per variation when possible (hook, visual, or CTA).

30. Run final quality and alignment checks

- Confirm that hook, body, visual, and destination all communicate the same core promise and target the same audience.
- Check spelling, grammar, and formatting for each platform's norms.
- Verify compliance with platform policies and any brand or industry guidelines before publishing.
